committee representing the official boards of a large majority of the Methodist Churches in the District and Bishop Hurst, which takes place tonight, is being looked forward to with interest closely alhed to excitement. Speaking of the recent turn pronounced views upon the action of Bishop Fowler seem to overlook the fact that the laity of the church represents the large part of Methodism, and without co-operation the ministry would be the first to realize the paucity of their efforts in the extension of the kingdom of Christ among men. Notwithstanding some of the members of the churches deprecate the movement on the part of a majority of the cflicial boards to seek to remove the stigma placed upon Dr. Naylor, the feeling among the ministry is quite as strong as among those in the humbler walks. While they do not care to talk for publication, many of the preachers have not hesitated to speak in no mild terms concerning the action of Bishop Fowler, and they declare their full sympathy in the efforts now bepronounced views upon the action of Bisho

If, as it is asserted, Bishop Hurst has odists within the bounds of his official station.

It is stated by the promoters of this movement that the efforts now being made are not because Dr. Naylor is personally involved, but upon a broader plane of resentment to the position taken by a bishop who exercises his power to humiliate the occupant of a high office, and bring discontent into the minds and hearts of the membership at large. Under the economy of the church it is the laity upon whom fall the obligations to give of their means to carry on the work of the episcopacy. Each church it assessed annually for the support of the bishops, and when public sentiment becomes aroused against the arbitrary exercise of power by the constituted authorities a feeling will become engendered that will culminate in action by the general conference in securing equal representation, where the voice of the laity can be heard, and where power to bring harm upon the church will be greatly

opens on the south side of Pennsylvania avenue, a few doors east of the Hotel Randall. When completed, it will be one of the handsomest pieces of architecture ever made for a theater. The lobby will be 135 feet long, twenty-four feet wide and sixteen feet high. It will be decorated in white and gold panels. The lighting will all be electric. The plans were shown to Hearry Irving when he played his engagement here a few weeks ago, and he snid that when finished it would make the Grand Opera House one of the safest and handsomest theaters he had ever played in. Hearry E. Abbey also spoke highly of the proposed improvements. Manager Allen will put in his own electric light plant, and it will be so arranged that it will be removed from the theater and out of the range of hearing.
